

PP 66: Lewis Lindsay Dyche (1857-1915) Lantern Slides

This collection of glass plate negatives, lantern slides, and other photographic images contains materials created mainly during Professor Dyche's expeditions to Alaska and Greenland between 1894 and 1896. These include landscapes, habitats and anthropological/ethnological studies. Also included are a variety of images taken from books; such as photographs, maps, sketches, and diagrams. These appear to have been used to enhance the various slide shows he presented. Of particular interest in this category are several original and doctored satirical cartoons and a series of images taken from the book The Voyage of the Kite.

This collection also includes a fairly extensive subset of negatives and slides taken of animals in the wild for use in Dyche's taxidermy projects, as well as negatives and slides of the projects themselves. These feature images taken at all stages of the taxidermic process, and with many of the completed panorama views. The bull bison and the moose are particularly recurrent, as these were among the first mounts that Dyche prepared.

The remaining negatives and slides within this collection include images created for use in Dyche's classroom and lectures. Among these are a substantial series of turtles and lizards, as well as various images of snake, frogs and mammalian embryos.

This collection has been divided into two subgroups: negatives and slides. These groups have, in turn, been assigned separate numbering systems. These arrangements are a continuation of that initiated by Professor Dyche. The bulk of the material had already been given numbers. Those items that did not have numbers were arranged by general subject and given numbers beginning with 1001. This system was applied to both the negative group and the slide group.

The slide group was also examined to determine slide show set created by Dyche. These are apparent based on the types of stickers and numbers applied to the slide frames. Ultimately 10 sets were isolated and assigned two part numbers. The first part is the slide set number and the second part is the number within the set that was assigned by Dyche. This system attempts to group by original slide set, as well as retain the original sequence within the presentation.

Within this collection are three standard sizes of glass negative. The smallest is about 3x4, the next and most common is 5x7, and finally, an 8x10 size. It also contains various other sizes of negative, but these do not appear to be at all standardized. The numbering system was generally assigned with out respect to the negative size. The smaller sizes were arranged strictly by subject matter, while the larger format negatives were kept together to avoid excessive weight and pressure on the smaller plates.

The final group of materials within this collection consists of photographic prints and more recent negatives. These were given a separate sequence of number to allow easy separation from the glass negatives and the slides from possible incorporation into the existing print and negative collection with University Archives.

- Archives Project: Lewis Lindsey Dyche Glass Plate Negatives and Slides at University of Kansas Archives –For Dr. Donald McCoy and Ms. Cathy Dwiggins, Class HIST 800 – As prepared by Venita L. Pine (July 23, 1992)

This collection was updated in November of 2006 and rehoused in archival quality non-acidic paper and boxes. The collection was then separated according to size, with the 5x7 sizes belonging to one set of slides and negatives and the 3x5 set in separate set. The slides and glass negatives retain all of the numbering and subject headings that were given to them by Venita L. Pine's cataloging. (Pine's cataloging did not take into account the size of the slides and therefore in separating the slides into different groups dependent on their size the number sequence is slightly altered)

In the 5x7 size section there are now two different groupings, one that is based on the numbering system L.L. Dyche put in place and the other not numbered by L.L. Dyche categorized in similar subjects with a more modern numbering system (starting with 1001). The 3x5 size section follows the same system as the 5x7 size section with the same subject categories and . The odd-sized slides (8x10, 4x6, & 5x8) and negatives that are less frequent are separated from the two main groups but they also still retain their numbering sequence and there original subject headings.
